

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

[0024] A triggering arrangement for a friction clutch includes at least one triggering element arrangeable on a clutch housing and is designed to interact with a pick-up arrangement to generate information relating to the rotary movement of the clutch housing about an axis of rotation. The at least one triggering element is of separate design from the clutch housing and is permanently connected or connectable thereto.